U. N. Gets Problem Of 'World Citizen'

Paris (AP)—Garry Davis, 26, citizen of the world is putting his lack of a nationality right up to the United Nations.

"If the U.N. can't solve a little personal problem, then it can't save humanity," Davis said.

He moved to the front steps of the U.N. restaurant in Paris yesterday when France refused to grant him permission to stay in the country any longer. Davis, war-time bomber pilot, surrendered his American passport and nationality last May. He is the son of Meyer Davis, American orchestra leader.

"The Palestine problem, the Korean problem and all the other problems the United Nations is worrying about are caused by a lack of any international law," he said. "They keep saying they have to settle all those little problems first." He added that if an international code were written nationalistic problems would cease.

"I planned this to bring attention to the fact that there is need for international government," Davis said. "The machinery is all set up. Now if we can just get over the last little hump."

A U. N. security officer said Davis is giving no trouble and will be left alone for the present.
